The Dy Comrs report is brief.

The distance of the tanks from the river channels is not known.

Whether there is any and what Atchkat below the tanks and which the same is sufficiently served by river channels is not quite clear. Also since when these tanks have ceased to be useful for purposes of irrigation.

One party in the village are willing to repair the tanks. They say that the tanks would be useful for men & cattle in the hot months when equally good facilities of water are not forthcoming. While the other party alleges that these tanks are a constant source of injury and danger to their lands and cattle, and that there is an abundant supply of water for men & cattle — to irrigate the lands and give out the beds for cultivation, as the Irrandóor channel irrigates the lands. Survey No 138 of Kallar is only a part of the entire tank and the other part forms survey No 69 measuring 2-11 Ac. Gun of the Vaddagami village. The whole extent of the tank bed in the two villages measuring 37-8 A. G. has been given out for cultivation. Survey No 115 of Kallar measuring 17-8 A. G. may be similarly disposed of. These lands, when cultivated for one season, are likely to fetch not less than double rent, if not more; and there would consequently yield about 600 rupees besides adding to the irrigated area of lands in this Taluk.

5. Under these circumstances I request that sanction may be accorded to breach the two tanks and dispose of their beds under the Darkhast Rules.
